permeate our society and how we have arrived where we are today because the world does not know or respect God our Creator. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. What are the ideas and thoughts behind what we believe...By Yourlastchance What are the ideas and thoughts behind what we believe in America? Your thoughts are not your own, you may believe something someone else said. These men are controlling what you think. Read this book and find out who they are. 6 of 6 people found the following review helpful. "contended for our minds" By Scott Walker This is a lot compressed into a book of this size. Breese explains coherently, the effects and meaning behind these most influential men's words and actions of the past. Each chapter deals separately with each man. There are many who may have never heard of all of these men, but we are surely feeling their (negative) influence even today. As the author puts it, "Much of modern education, commercial interaction, social planning, intellectual conviction, and even religion is still guided by the constructs formulated by those thinkers of an earlier generation." A hundred other men could have been added to the list. But he believes these seven men "were the progenitors of the most influential movements of this [20th] century"; "they ruled the world more permanently"; "contended for our minds", and these are those men: Charles Darwin: what has come to be known as, "social Darwinism"; this man is credited with evolution, materialism, naturalism, and natural selection. And now these are being treated as if it were fact; as "a law, as gravity is a law". The ultimate devastation is occurring in our public education. Breese contends, "Our society has come to assume that the source of all knowledge is science; once a thing is established as being scientific, it moves beyond debate and becomes an article of faith." Karl Marx: think of him as a "social philosopher" or a "professional revolutionary". He is of course famous for his "Communist Manifesto": "scientific socialism", world's destiny, anti-capitalist, atheism, utopia---read it---a tightness will wallow up in your throat---because you will understand Marxism is very much with us. It is even seen as liberalism in the church. His contemporaries: Feuerbach, Rousseau, and Engels; and his protégé: Lenin. Julius Wellhausen: he brought liberalism to the church. He taught human reason is totally dependable, the bible as myth, and rationalism. The stage was then set for Machen. Sigmund Freud: that life or death is just instinct through human conditions, "after all, psychoanalysis was the new revelation, and psychotherapy the new salvation." John Dewey: a humanist; this man radically redefined education through social change. Hegel, among others would influence his world view. John Keynes: believed government to be the answer through investment: Keynesian economics. The "New Deal" was constructed through his influence. Soren Kierkegaard: known as the father of Existentialism. It is only through his writings we know him. He is confusing and contradictory. In his mind there is no right, no wrong, and no truth. Albert Einstein is not one of the seven, but he becomes important to the discussion. In this chapter Breese discusses the unintended influence of relativity turning into relativism. Ponder these words: "Surely the world ought daily to thank God that the word 'American' was attached to the name of Albert Einstein. Had that word remained 'German', how different the world would be today!" "We have allowed the minority to run the majority. But there need only be a few strong to overcome the rushing tide of deception. A little socialism and evolution can't hurt, right? "The world of delusion is neither a good nor safe place to live." "Wish you well" Scott

Though their bodies lie cold and dormant, the grave cannot contain the influence these seven men have had on today's world. They continue to rule because they have altered the thinking of society. They generated philosophies that have been ardently grasped by masses of people but are erroneous and antisciptural. Today these ideas pervade our schools, businesses, homes, and even the church. As we continue to unknowingly subscribe to their philosophies, we keep the grave open for Charles Darwin, Karl Marx, Julius Wellhausen, John Dewey, Sigmund Freud, John Maynard Keynes, and Soren Kierkegaard. Dave Breese warns us of the dangers of believing unreservedly the ideas of these seven men. He also reminds us of the only man whose life and words we can trust completely--Jesus Christ.
