Very engaging historic overview that left me wanting to learn more. As a result I purchased "Lust For Inca Gold" as suggested by the autor. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Intriguing! By Evelyn
If you like reading historical, travel, adventure, exploration and discovery stories, these century old documents have it all! An intriguing tale of a lost Inca treasure!

A compilation of obscure historical papers and correspondence concerning Ecuador, The Llanganati Mountains, Inca Treasure and the "Derrotero de Valverde" presented to The Royal Geographical Society around the turn of the century! These papers tell an intriguing and timeless tale that begat many! "On the Mountains of Llanganati, in the Eastern Cordillera of the Quitoian Andes" by Richard Spruce "Travels in Ecuador" by Jordan Stabler "The Inca Treasure of Llanganati" by E.C. Brooks
Over the past century numerous explorers have conducted countless expeditions into the Llanganati Mountains of Ecuador utilizing Spruce's paper as the basis for their quest of hidden Inca gold. Many of these explorers, including the world renowned Llanganati expert Eugen K. Brunner, conducted their quests oblivious to the entirety of Spruce's paper, of which only a portion had been published in his work "Notes Of A Botanist on the Amazon Andes." Without access to Spruce's entire paper and the works of Stabler and Brooks, many years of explorations were in vain. Now, all three works can be read together relating an intriguing tale of many genres!

About the Author
Richard Spruce Esq. [1817-1893] English - Famous Victorian Era Botanist
Jordan H. Stabler [1885-1938] American Career Diplomat
Colonel E. C. Brooks [1860-1922] American - West Point Class of 1886
Steven J. Charbonneau - A Vermont native raised in the resort town of Stowe, Mr. Charbonneau traveled to Ecuador at twenty-three to visit a childhood friend serving in Ecuador with the U.S. Peace Corps. Mr. Charbonneau fell in love with a young Ecuadorian woman in Quito and married. The couples wedding reception was thrown by General Gribaldo Mio, Commander of the Ecuadorian Army. Little did Mr. Charbonneau know that destiny would forever tie him to this mysterious land and its people! Nearly a decade would pass, during which time General Mio had advanced to Chief of the Armed Forces Joint Command, the third most powerful position in Ecuador, subordinate only to the Minister of Defense and the President of the Republic. Mr. Charbonneaus mother-in-laws life had also recently changed by her marriage to Eugen K. Brunner (adventurer, explorer and spy) world renowned expert on Ecuadors lost treasures. Destiny ultimately drew Mr. Charbonneau back to Ecuador and involved him within a story of international intrigue, espionage, murder, kidnapping, embezzlement, deceit, discovery and untold secrets! No stranger to the US Embassy in Quito, the Ecuadorian Ministry of Defense, Presidential Palace, and Institute of Patrimony and Culture, Mr. Charbonneau furthered his father-in-laws research, translated, and published Brunners exclusive writings, drawings and discoveries that related to the Llanganati Treasure deposit in an extensive tell-all book; Lust for Inca Gold: The Llanganati Treasure Story Maps (2012). This book was followed by an updated version; Lust for Inca Gold: Second Edition (2013). Arguably a leading expert on the topic, Mr. Charbonneaus personal connection and involvement with his stories allows him, through mere prose, to take seemingly unrelated events and draw back the veil of mere coincidence, thereby connecting the unconnected! His characters, both good and bad, are presented in a matter of fact style which reminds the reader that the events he relates are fact, not fiction. Mr. Charbonneaus extensive research has rewritten history, uncovered new information and revived interest in a centuries old treasure quest! Mr. Charbonneau hails from Vermont and Nevada, was married for nearly thirty years and is the proud parent of five.
