

[Download free ebook] Violence and Belief in Late Antiquity: Militant Devotion in Christianity and Islam (Divinations: Rereading Late Ancient Religion)

Violence and Belief in Late Antiquity: Militant Devotion in Christianity and Islam (Divinations: Rereading Late Ancient Religion)

Thomas Sizgorich

*ePub | *DOC | audiobook | ebooks | Download PDF*

DOWNLOAD

READ ONLINE

#1370272 in Books Sizgorich Thomas 2014-03-25 Original language: English PDF # 1 9.02 x .91 x 5.981, 1.19 #File Name: 0812223055408 pages Violence and Belief in Late Antiquity Militant Devotion in Christianity and Islam | File size: 51.Mb

Thomas Sizgorich : Violence and Belief in Late Antiquity: Militant Devotion in Christianity and Islam (Divinations: Rereading Late Ancient Religion) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Violence and Belief in Late Antiquity: Militant Devotion in Christianity and Islam (Divinations: Rereading Late Ancient Religion):

11 of 13 people found the following review helpful. GroundbreakingBy Keenan Baca-WitnersThomas Sizgorich has offered the world a truly innovative study that marries Late Antique studies with early Islamic studies. While our contemporary time has done much to highlight the differences between Islam and Christianity, Thomas Sizgorich demonstrates that in fact, forms of militant piety sprang from a communal source that was at once both Christian and Muslim, often in conversation with one another and often at odds. Truly, Thomas Sizgorich's book will be used by scholars for years to come in their own research. A truly groundbreaking piece of scholarship.

In Violence and Belief in Late Antiquity, Thomas Sizgorich seeks to understand why and how violent expressions of religious devotion became central to the self-understandings of both Christian and Muslim communities between the fourth and ninth centuries. Sizgorich argues that the cultivation of violent martyrdom as a path to holiness was in no way particular to Islam; rather, it emerged from a matrix put into place by the Christians of late antiquity. Paying close attention to the role of memory and narrative in the formation of individual and communal selves, Sizgorich identifies a common pool of late ancient narrative forms upon which both Christian and Muslim communities drew. In the process of recollecting the past, Sizgorich explains, Christian and Muslim communities alike elaborated iterations of Christianity or Islam that demanded of each believer a willingness to endure or inflict violence on God's behalf and thereby created militant local pieties that claimed to represent the one "real" Christianity or the only "pure" form of Islam. These militant communities used a shared system of signs, symbols, and stories, stories in which the faithful manifested their purity in conflict with the imperial powers of the world.

"Thomas Sizgorich is . . . a scholar truly at home in both the late antique and early Islamic worlds who does a superlative job of illustrating the continuities between them." American Historical "In this bold and learned book, Thomas Sizgorich probes the ideological roots of violence in the Christian and Muslim communities of late antiquity." Church History "A work of erudition and eloquent argument, combined with an abiding ethical impulse underwriting its historical project. Sizgorich has done a great service by historicizing some elements of religious violence and uncovering its underlying logics with sophistication and care." Catholic Historical "Sizgorich brings the early history of Islamic martyrdom and the emergence of the concept of the shahid ('witness' or 'martyr') into a common framework of similar developments in late antique Christianity in the eastern Mediterranean and the Levant. In doing so, he shows that the two worlds were closely related in their development of apparently different kinds of aggressive, even violent behavior that were connected to ideas of ascetic self-control and the disciplining of the community." Brent D. Shaw, Princeton University "An original, impressive, fascinating, and very important book. Sizgorich makes a seminal contribution by offering an alternative to the tendency that treats Islam as completely 'other' from the world in which it took shape. He offers instead a vision of an Islam that is an organic part of the late antique cultural and religious world." Nadia Maria El-Cheikh, American University of Beirut About the Author Thomas Sizgorich was Associate Professor of History at the University of California, Irvine.